

NATURAL TREAT OPTIONS

There are many treat options available on the market today and we know that it can be overwhelming when you're looking at multiple aisles in the store. Here, we'll talk about the natural treats that we like! We are using a 5 star rating system for these reviews.

FISH SKINS

Fish skin treats definitely have a stink to them, but they are wonderfully crunchy and provide natural Omega 3, which helps skin and coat be shiny and healthy. If you need to break these treats up smaller, we recommend breaking them with a hammer as they can be quite hard. Braided skins last longer than the strips.

Crunch Level ★★★★★

Stink Level ★★★★★

Yum Rating ★★★★★

Durability ★

LUNG

Lung treats are one of the yummier dehydrated treats. They are often cut into easy to handle square cuts, which make them good for a middle value training treat.

Crunch Level ★★★★★

Stink Level ★★

Yum Rating ★★★★★

Durability ★

SWEET POTATOES

These simple treats provide a natural fiber and antioxidants. They can be a delicious alternative to rawhide. If you get the dehydrated, make sure they are very dry; as any moisture can cause them to go bad quickly.

Crunch Level ★★★★★

Stink Level ★

Yum Rating ★★★★★

Durability ★★★

BULLY STICKS

Bully sticks are a natural product that you have to start your dog on slowly. Giving your dog too much too quickly can cause stomach upset and diarrhea. These chews are available as single sticks or braids. The braids last a little longer while being chewed, but remember, start slowly!

Crunch Level ★★★★

Stink Level ★★★★

Yum Rating ★★★★★

Durability ★★★★

TENDONS

Tendons are another rawhide alternative, as they can be durable depending on the shape of the treat and the size of your dog. The circular or bone twisted tendons may last longer than the regular stick style. These treats are high in protein and low fat.

Crunch Level ★★★★★

Stink Level ★

Yum Rating ★★★★★

Durability ★

TRACHEA

Trachea are often sold in tube shapes, which can help slow down your dog when they are first learning how to eat them. They do have a mildly greasy feel to them, but they can promote healthier teeth and gums with the chewing. These treats are high in protein as well as glucosamine and chondroitin. Large dogs will chew through these treats faster than small breeds. These can also be stuffed for extra fun!

Crunch Level ★★★★★

Stink Level ★★

Yum Rating ★★★★★

Durability ★★★★

HOOF

Cow hooves are most common style of hoof type treats. You will see them sold stuffed or unstuffed. This review is for unstuffed hooves, because the stuffing causes them to no longer be a natural treat (and the stuffing makes a huge mess in your house!). Hooves are more ideal for small to medium breed dogs, as large dogs can shatter them and potentially choke. The longer your dog chews on this treat, the stinkier they get! These treats are high protein and low in fat. Stuff them with your favorite goodies!

Crunch Level ★★

Stink Level ★★★★★

Yum Rating ★★★★

Durability ★★★★★

ANTLERS

Deer and Elk antlers are quite popular in pet stores and with dog owners. They are available split or whole. These chews are not recommended for young puppies or very aggressive chewers, as there is a risk of tooth chipping. These are natural chews which are long lasting if your dog is interested in them. Try a split first, as the marrow is clearly available, then try the whole treats if your dog enjoys the chew. Elk antlers are slightly more durable than deer antlers.

Crunch Level ★

Stink Level ★

Yum Rating ★★★

Durability ★★★★★